

ABSTRACT

A power distribution system includes a plurality of loads and a plurality of power sources. The power distribution system also includes an interconnect arrangement including a plurality of interconnects. The interconnects connect each 5 load to a given number of different ones of the sources so that each load is fully powered notwithstanding failure of any one of the sources.